The DoJ is taking forward legislative provisions (Justice Bill) in order to implement a new DNA and fingerprint retention framework which will comply with the Marper and Gaughran European Court of Human Rights judgments. The new framework sets out maximum retention periods (75/50/25 years) for which DNA and fingerprints can be retained by the PSNI based on the nature and seriousness of the offence, the age of the person concerned, criminal history, and whether the person is convicted or not convicted. As an additional safeguard and to ensure proportionality, the legislation also makes statutory provision for the ongoing need for the retention of DNA and fingerprints to be reviewed by the PSNI.

The DoJ has developed suitable review mechanism proposals (which will form the basis for subordinate legislation) to ensure that long-term retained DNA and fingerprints are subject to a scheduled review part-way through a maximum retention period. Scheduled reviews will be undertaken by the PSNI who will assess the continuing need to retain DNA profiles and fingerprints in each individual case.

The review mechanism posposals are the subject of this assessment.
